

Food for thought

Trafalgar Infant School, in Twickenham, has won the Richmond section of a competition urging young children to think about food production and sustainability.

Organised by School Food Matters and Richmond Environmental Network (REN), the contest required participants to produce a short film about the life of a staple food.

Blue Peter gardener Chris Collins was on hand to award the prizes, which included a garden makeover from social housing repairs and maintenance specialist Mears, as well as a purpose-built allotment.

"It was a very polished film," said Chris. "The children should be very proud."
